WATCH SORE THROATS

because swollen glands or inflamed membranes often affect other tissues and lung trouble easily follows.

As Nature's corrector of throat troubles the pure cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is speedily converted into germ-resisting tissue; its tested glycerine is curative and healing, while this wholesome emulsion relieves the trouble and rebuilds the forces to resist tubercular germs and avert the weakening influence which usually follows.

If any member of your family has a tender throat, get a bottle of Scott's Emulsion today. Physicians prescribe it to avert throat troubles, overcome bronchial disorders and strengthen the lungs. No alcohol or harmful drugs. Always insist on Scott's.

JUDGE ROBINSON

A Tribute in "Case and Comment" Attracts Notice.

The November number of "Case and Comment," the lawyers' magazine, which is just off the press, contains the following article by E. S. Bock of the bar, concerning Judge Ira E. Robinson, embellished with a photograph.

The president of the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia, Ira Ellsworth Robinson, is descended from a family of trans-Allegheny pioneers, who made their way to the western slopes of the Appalachians via bear paths and Indian trails. These worthy progenitors, in addition to great physical vigor, acquired, in their struggles to overcome the hardships of a wild and rugged country, firm mental courage and determination; and they left their descendants a rich heritage of the same qualities of mind. Judge Robinson spent his early life on the farm of his father, in Taylor and Barbour counties, West Virginia.

In 1891, at the age of twenty-one years, he was admitted to the practice of law in this state. From 1891 until the fall of 1907 he applied himself faithfully to the practice of his profession. For a term of four years he was public prosecutor of Taylor county. Afterward he represented his district in the state senate. In 1907 a vacancy on the supreme bench was created by the resignation of Hon. Joseph M. Sanders, and Judge Robinson was appointed to fill the unexpired term.

Although a very young man at the time, he soon demonstrated the wisdom of Governor Dawson in his appointment. Judge Robinson's opinion in the well known will case of Woodville vs. Woodville, 53 W. Va. 288, 60 S. E. 141, delivered on January 14, 1908, exemplified his fine literary style and clear juristic conception. Other opinions delivered by him at the same term of the court revealed unquestionably his excellent qualifications and attracted favorable comment.

As a natural sequence, therefore, Judge Robinson was at the state judicial convention held at Parkersburg in April, 1908, nominated without opposition as a candidate to succeed himself, and in the fall of that year was elected as a judge of the bench upon which he is now sitting. Of the bench, Judge Robinson was a public-spirited citizen and a lawyer of rare ability. In the active practice, he was a man of direct, positive and precise methods and habits of work, and of sane and urbane manner. These qualities he took with him to the bench, together with a pronounced native judicial temperament.

This inborn judicial fitness he has unconsciously developed and polished by assiduous and careful study of the law, new and old, and of the history and philosophy of the law. Justianian, Coke, Blackstone, Kent, Story, Tucker, Minor, Maine and other masters are intimate friends of the judge. Classic literature and political history are no less familiar to him. What influence the study of the law itself, or of the history and philosophy of the law, or of classic literature and political history, has had upon the work of Judge Robinson is necessarily beyond conjecture. But the combined influence is readily apparent. His opinions are brief, logical, unequivocal, convincing expositions of the law, given in short sentences of pure English.

And looking beneath the style and language of his opinions, we see that their substructure is reason. "No opinion," says Judge Robinson in Maxwell vs. Maxwell, 67 W. Va. 120, 27, L. R. A. (N. S.) 712 S. E. 379, "should be controlled by the number of precedents found in other jurisdictions. Nor should those precedents be persuasive unless founded upon sound reason. We should give them only such weight as their sense discloses."

The unremitting extra-judicial labors of Judge Robinson have driven back his intellectual horizon and given breadth to his views on the grave questions which confront him upon the bench. Familiarity with history, legal and political, have impressed him with the sacredness of human liberty as vouchsafed to us by law. To him, any encroachment upon it is subversive of the safety of the state.

In the noted cases of state ex rel. Mays vs. Brown, 71 W. Va. 519, 77 S. E. 243, Ann Cas. 1914C, 145, L. R. A. (N. S.) 996, and Re Jones, 71 W. Va. 609, 77 S. E. 1029, Ann Cas. 1914C, 31, 45 L. R. A. (N. S.) 1030, he vigorously and learnedly protested against the opinion of his associates which upheld trial and conviction by military commissions organized in the suppression of the miner's strike in Kanawha and Rayette counties three years ago. When these cases were decided, a veritable tidal wave of printer's ink swept over the country in hearty commendation of Judge Robinson's forceful dissent. Judge Robinson is a member of the West Virginia Bar Association. This membership he has held since his name was enrolled upon the roster of his profession. He is a member of the American Bar Association, of the American Institute of Criminal Law and Criminology, of which he has recently been chosen president, and of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, of the National Economic League, and similar organizations.

He is a leading layman of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1912 he was a member of the general conference of that church, serving as a member of the judiciary committee. He delivers every year, gratis to the state, a series of lectures to the students in the college of law of the West Virginia University, and contributes frequently to legal and other periodicals.

OSCAR VOGT IS ACQUITTED OF NUISANCE

Of a "Gross" Character,
Namely, That of Speaking
French in Berlin Streets.

BERLIN, Nov. 4.—After two sensational trials, the first of which resulted in a conviction, Prof. Oscar Vogt, director of the royal neurobiological institute and one of the most distinguished scientists of Germany, has been acquitted of the charge of "gross nuisance," in that he spoke in French on the street, and assaulted Pastor Kettner when the latter protested against the use of the foreign tongue.

The facts concerning the alleged assault, even at the first trial, soon faded into the background, and the whole issue hinged on the question of whether or not a court would rule for or against the public use of French. Justice Westermann, in deciding for Prof. Vogt, declares that no nuisance had been committed, that Prof. Vogt did not speak French with the intention of insulting or hurting the feelings of anyone, and that he had the right to assume that those whom he might meet "carry patriotism in their heart, not in their tongue."

The conviction and sentence to five months imprisonment of Gabriele Barthel, a Lorraine girl for having insulted the Prussian army by referring to its members as "boches" has aroused an even greater wave of discussion that gradually has extended all over Germany.

Legal lights even have been called upon to render an opinion as to whether the word "boche" really is an insult or not, and they answer without exception, backed up by judicial decisions, that the spirit in which it is uttered determines the innocence or guilt of the speaker.

Judge Horch, of Mayence, has been appealed to for a decision regarding the word, and from a variety of precedents, largely French, he unhesitatingly declares it is an insult, even though its inherent meaning be not so.
